

Applus+ acquires American Autologic

8/30/2006

Applus+ Inc., the US subsidiary of Applus+ based in Barcelona has acquired the American company Autologic, based in Sussex, Wisconsin. Applus+ is a leading provider of government and automotive solutions for vehicle testing in the United States. It manages nearly 10 million vehicle tests annually, oversees more than 2,200 inspection stations in the States of Connecticut, Georgia, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Washington.

AutoLogic, is a globally-known industry leader in designing and producing highly advanced automotive aftermarket diagnostic equipment and software. The American company handles every aspect of the product development cycle from concept realization to manufacture. This is the first diagnostic company to recognize the viability of the Pocket PC (PDA) as a complete emissions diagnostic platform for the automotive sector, and it was the first to produce a true commercial Pocket PC-based portable gas analyzer for vehicles. "The recent acquisition will position Applus+ in the US ahead of the competition by expanding our product portfolio, expertise and know-how in vehicle inspection equipment design and manufacture. We are sure this transaction will bring new and better opportunities for Applus+", says Jonathan Donado, CEO of Applus+ in the USA.
